

HOW MUCH IS MY PROPERTY WORTH?

There are three ways to value a property: an online estimation, a real estate agent appraisal and a bank valuation.

An online estimation tool generally works off transactional real estate data made available through data providers via a computer algorithm. It considers basic property features, local market trends and recent sales. It does not factor in the presentation, fixtures and finishes, renovations undertaken or the property's current condition.

An appraisal is an estimate by a real estate agent who compares your property with similar ones that have sold, taking into consideration the physical condition and features. An appraisal will give you a clearer idea of how much your property is worth in the current market.

A valuation is the most formal of the three. It is completed by a professional valuer who will work in conjunction with a bank or financial institution. They look at every aspect of a property and its surrounding environment to determine its current and future value. There is a cost for a valuation, which is between $200-$600.

Determining how much your property is worth is one of the most important processes of selling your property.

You need to be mindful of overvalued property appraisals to get your business and undervalued property appraisals to get a quick sale.

When listing a property for sale, you want to choose the most accurate appraisal with supporting evidence.

If you are unsure about an appraisal, you may want to consider paying for a valuation. This report can also be given to potential buyers.

FAST-TRACK GUIDE TO BUYING AND SELLING

There are many factors, different terminologies, and requirements that you need to take into consideration when buying and selling a property. To be knowledgeable and successful in the property market takes time, experience, learning and research.

In this issue, our focus is on educating our investors about the property market, a transaction's hidden costs and the terminologies often referred to.

UNDERSTANDING THE METHODS FOR BUYING AND SELLING A PROPERTY

If you are looking to buy or sell a property, then you need to understand the different terminologies or methods used.

Private Treaty or Sale – This selling method requires the seller to set a price from the outset that can be negotiated between the parties. Once an offer is accepted, there is a cooling-off period and certain conditions, such as obtaining finance approval and inspection reports for the sale to become unconditional.

Contact Agent – This selling method is designed to get the buyer to contact the agent to request the price, as the seller may not want to publicly disclose the selling price.

Auction – This selling method is where buyers bid to purchase a property. The seller will set a reserve price, which is the price they are willing to sell the property. Once the reserve price is achieved, the property is placed on the market for sale, with no pending conditions. When bidding at an auction, it is important to have your finance approval and conduct all your searches and inspections before auction day.

Expression of interest – This selling method is like a private treaty. However, it requires written offers from the buyers to be passed on to the seller. There will be a stipulated close date for all offers, and the property price is not always advertised.

Tender – This selling method requires the buyer to submit a formal bid in response to the seller's tender price. Buyers will compete against one another without knowing the other parties' offers. The property is usually sold to the highest bidder.

When deciding to sell your property, it is best to speak with your real estate agent to discuss the pros and cons of each selling method.
